Tour Highlights

Porta San Sebastiano: The largest and one of the best-preserved gates in the Aurelian Walls, originally named Porta Appia as the Appian Way began here.

Arco di Druso: a monumentalized arch of the Antonine Aqueduct, built in the 3rd century AD to carry water to the Baths of Caracalla. It was later incorporated into the defenses connected to Porta San Sebastiano.

Museo delle Mura: Located within the Porta San Sebastiano, this museum explores the history of Rome's fortifications, from the earliest walls to the Aurelian Walls and their later modifications. Visitors can walk along a restored section of the ancient patrol path.

Porta Latina: A well-preserved gate in the Aurelian Walls, taking its name from the ancient Via Latina that passed through it. It features a single arch and two semi-circular towers and has undergone several restorations throughout its history.
